Experience Something New!

Bushcraft

Experience nature at ground level as groups learn how to survive and thrive in the wilderness. Teams progress along a journey of discovery acquiring new skills, completing challenges and learning more about each other. Free from the stresses of civilisation this is a great way to build and cement relationships in a memorable and highly informative way.

We combine primitive skills and modern techniques with a hands on approach. The possible activities are vast and we can tailor each event to the group, your objectives and the venue.

Suggested Activities for Your Group

We would suggest concentrating on the immediate survival priorities where time is of the essence and team work and communication vital. Detailed examples might be:

Signalling & Communication - We use a series of scenarios to demonstrate the need for clear, precise communication and the techniques that can be used to signal in distress. Who will end up with a friendly wave from the pilot and who will be airlifted to safety?

Shelter - After an informative talk on the need for shelter and basic techniques teams must gather materials and work quickly to build an effective shelter before the 'weather' closes in. These are then tested, often with the braver or more confident teams inside!

Fire & Cooking - In cold climates fire can make the difference between life and death! Guests are shown different fire, lighting & cooking techniques.

Navigation - Map reading and bushcraft skills enables guests to focus on nature's clues to find their way.
